

Towards the Final Phase: Sharing Results and Looking Ahead

5th Newsletter

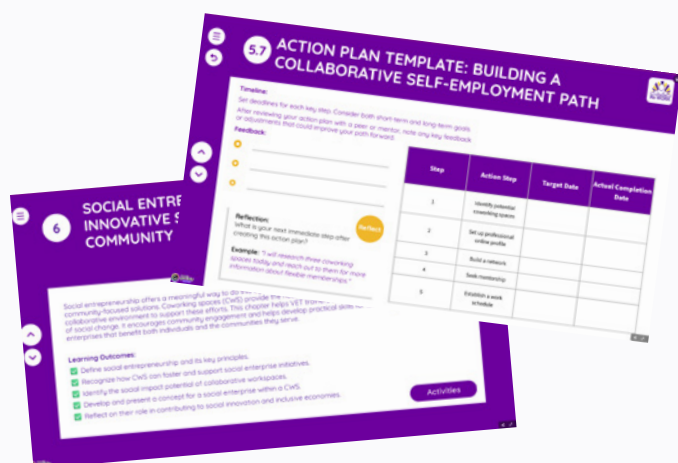

From e-learning development to final conference and project completion

The RE-WORK project is entering its final phase, with partners actively developing digital learning resources and preparing to share the project's key results with a wider audience.

What we are working on now:

Finalising e-learning content

Building on the Resource Kit, which is available online, partners are developing six e-learning videos, each corresponding to one of the developed modules. These videos translate the key concepts of the Resource Kit into accessible and engaging digital content.

In addition to the e-learning videos, each module includes complementary learning materials, such as interactive activities, quizzes to support knowledge consolidation, and a dedicated presentation summarising the main contents of the module.

To pilot and validate these materials, the project implemented a Train the Trainers programme consisting of 12 online training sessions designed to empower VET trainers and educators to integrate Coworking and Collaborative Workspaces (CWS) concepts into their own educational contexts and training programmes.

Once finalised, all materials and the online Resource Kit will be made available online.

The videos have also been uploaded to the project's YouTube channel, ensuring free access for a wider audience and supporting self-paced and flexible learning pathways.

What's coming next

Upcoming Online Info Days, Final Conference and Transnational Project Meeting

Project partners have started organising Online Info Days aimed at spreading awareness of RE-WORK's key results. These sessions highlight how Coworking and Collaborative Workspaces (CWS) can offer meaningful responses to some of the most pressing challenges facing today's workforce, particularly among younger generations, such as quiet quitting, job dissatisfaction, and the search for a healthier work-life balance.

The next and final Transnational Project Meeting took place online on May 20th, hosted by PRO WORK, the project coordinator. During this meeting, partners discussed the current status of the project, final deliverables and responsibilities, as well as its next steps towards its final phase.

This TPM was a key moment to consolidate progress, and will be followed by Re-WORK's Final Conference, taking place in June. The conference will gather project partners, as well as stakeholders, colleagues, and educators.

The programme will include:

- an introduction to the project by PRO WORK,
- and contributions from project partners on key results of all work packages.

We are looking forward to sharing and discussing the outputs of Re-WORK!
